

A2 Latin Unseen Verse (OVID) Past Paper: 1992 (Ulysses' claim for the arms of Achilles)

- 2 In a debate between himself and Ajax as to who should be awarded the arms of Achilles, Ulysses reminds Menelaus of how invaluable he has been to the Greeks in the Trojan War, citing his embassy to Troy and his particular usefulness in siege warfare.

Before the war, when the sacrifice of Agamemnon's daughter was required to obtain a wind from Greece, I was the one who persuaded the reluctant father to consider the interests of the state. Then I was sent to the girls' mother, not to persuade her, but to trick her into agreement by cunning. If you, Ajax, had been entrusted with such a mission, we should still be waiting for a wind now!

mittor et Iliacas audax orator ad arces visa que et intrata est altae mihi curia¹ Troiae—plena que adhuc erat illa viris. interritus egi quam mihi mandarat communem Graecia causam, accuso que Parin² praedamque Helenamque reposco et moveo Priamum Priamoque Antenora² iunctum.
at Paris et fratres et qui rapuere³ sub illo
vix tenueré manus—scis hoc, Menelae—ne fandas, prima que lux⁴ nostri tecum fuit illa pericli.
longa referre mora est quae consilioque manuque utiliter feci spatiosi⁵ tempore belli.
post acies primas, urbis se moenibus hostes continuere diu, nec aperti copia Martis ulla fuit: decimo demum pugnavimus anno.
quid facis interea, qui nil nisi proelia nosti?
quis tuus usus erat? nam si mea facta requiris,
hostibus insidior, fossa munimina cingo, consolor socios, ut longi taedia belli mente ferant placida; doceo quo simus alendi⁶ armandique modo; mittor quo postulat usus.⁷
